WORKING WITH LOCAL DEPARTMENTS OF MOTOR VEHICLES
New York county clerks play an historic and important role as public servants. Along with the Sheriff and District Attorney, the county clerk is one of three county officials named in the State Constitution.

The role of the county clerk was established in the 1660’s, under the Dongan Laws, which was an act of the British Crown to establish the original counties in the Colony of New York.

Over 350 years later, the role of the county clerk as the chief record and filing officer for the county has remained consistent, but their duties have grown much more complex with changes in population, technology, and the state’s laws, policies and regulations.

In recent years, these county records managers and clerks of the court pushed for and achieved state legislation to allow for electronic filings and electronic land record filings to help residents and the government achieve recording efficiencies and ease of use.

Most county clerks now manage and operate local Departments of Motor Vehicles (DMV) Offices. This is not a function of the State Constitution or from county local law/resolution. Instead, the New York State Legislature, under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 205, requires county clerks in 51 counties to serve as agents of the State DMV Commissioner. Their functions include, but are not limited to, the registration of motor vehicles, motorcycles, snowmobiles, vessels and all-terrain vehicles, the issuance of license plates, processing certificates of title, the issuance of non-driver identification cards and drivers’ licenses, and motor vehicle enforcement transactions.

In many ways, the county clerks are best positioned to operate DMV offices that serve the driving and identification needs of local residents. Clerks understand local needs and can respond in Local Departments of Motor Vehicles

For example, clerks control the location and hours of operation of local DMV offices, mindful of taxpayer concerns and county demographics.

Under State law there is a fee sharing arrangement between the local DMV and the State which has not been adjusted since 1999. That arrangement pertains to all fees collected for work performed at county DMV offices by county employees. Currently, counties retain 12.7% of the fees collected for work performed at county DMV’s by county employees, and remit 87.3% to the New York State general fund. This is for fee-only work and it is important to note there are many functions a county DMV employee performs that attach no fee. These services cost the county to perform (see table 2).

As more and more New Yorkers use the Internet to conduct their DMV transactions online, this funding imbalance between the state and counties has further widened. The State keeps approximately 98% of all online DMV transactions, and remits a minimal share to counties that operate DMVs. The main problem is that more difficult and time consuming transactions are done at the local DMV office, while simpler transactions are often done online. The result is that DMV offices operated by county clerks are doing the business that is more time and resource intensive, but their revenues are going down because the easier transactions are processed online, and the state receives nearly all of the fees. The result is that counties are competing against the state for fee-based business. In 2014-15 the State DMV generated $1.3 billion in transactional fees, of which a surplus of $942 million went to the State’s general fund. In contrast, the 51 county DMV offices combined generated only $39.7 million. This growing revenue gap will leave New Yorkers with more complicated DMV transactional needs but fewer places to go because local DMV offices cannot continue to operate under a business model that is seeing steady declines in revenue.

Green Light New York

On June 17, 2019 the State Legislature passed and the Governor signed the “Driver’s License Access and Privacy Act” (Green Light NY). This bill, which has an enacting date of December 14, 2019, allows for the issuance of a New York State driver’s license for undocumented immigrants. This act further requires confidentiality of a license applicant’s personal information, restricting disclosure of the information to third parties unless a warrant or court order signed by a federal judge is presented to the DMV operator. Upon such a disclosure, the DMV Commissioner must notify within three days the individual whose records were requested.

The Green Light New York law will increase the workload and costs associated to DMV offices. A 2019 report by the Fiscal Policy Institute (FPI) estimates that 265,000 undocumented immigrants statewide would obtain driver’s licenses, including 64,000 north of New York City and 51,000 on Long Island. These new applications will provide an expanded set of challenges to properly implement. These challenges included: 1) expanding DMV office translating services and 2) creating a new system by which foreign documentation can be verified and processed. The New York State Association of County Clerks is advocating for the State to create and pay for the system to meet these expanded service needs. To date, the State DMV has not indicated how this system will be implemented.

Additional current costs: Multiple counties have proactively filed suit on this matter to seek clarification on if this law conflicts with any Federal or State Laws. These suits could impact the when this law is enacted.

Counties are advocating for a more equitable revenue share between the state and local DMVs. NYSAC and the county clerks association are calling on State Leaders to increase the county revenue rate from 12.7%. Even a modest increase would allow county DMV offices to provide residents with essential services at the local level, and would constitute relief from an underfunded state mandate.
